He was very happy to receive this and several other books on this subject.0 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Love it!By Tom SmaltzThis is an excellent read. I don't normally like nonfiction but this is very interesting. The Mongolian Beer commercial was hilarious.

There are connections to make everywhere in time. But no connection is greater; no single event had a greater impact on civilization as the advent of fermented and brewed beverages. What if it never existed? What if there were no wines, no beers, and no mead to speak of? How about, no coffee or tea? Take a journey to see the impact these beverages had on our modern world and learn to make those concoctions in your own home. Whether you are a fan of the bubbly or an occasional partaker in a cold one, you should be mindful of the effect that brew has had on history. Next time you toast at a wedding or enjoy a frosty beer on a hot day, pay homage and enjoy.

About the AuthorJohn Dooley is an avid historian and award winning home-brewer. This book is the product of his battling cancer, killing time and love of storytelling. He, his beautiful wife and four children live in the rural outskirts of Philadelphia. "He doesn't always drink beer, but when he does he makes it himself. John Dooley, the second most interesting man in the world."
