CSIRO : Australian Standard for the Hygienic Production of Wild Game Meat for Human Consumption (Food Regulation Standing Committee Technical Report Series) before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Australian Standard for the Hygienic Production of Wild Game Meat for

Human Consumption (Food Regulation Standing Committee Technical Report Series):

This Australian Standard lays out the standards required for producing game meat for human consumption from wild animals and birds killed in their natural environment. It sets the minimum standards required in hygiene for harvesting, transporting, processing, packaging and storage, to ensure a safe and wholesome product. Provision is made for small animals such as hare and game birds presented whole. This new Standard supercedes the previous version, SCARM Report 57 (AS 4464:1997).
