Just the kind of book i was looking for, ...By Imelda Rachim Just the kind of book i was looking for, something with simple recipes and clear instructions. But it also have something for me to develop my newly-found hobby for something more challenging and entertaining. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Four Stars By Helen Woods Good recipes and beautifully photographed. Happy with book. 3 of 3 people found the following review helpful. Cakilicious By Joan Brayden It is an awful pity Rachel is not part of my built in kitchen but her books are the next best thing... Cake is easy, simple yet outstanding.... Love it.

Praise for Rachel Allen: 'A natural TV chef: relaxed, articulate and knowledgeable' Sunday Times 'Food for real people' Irish Examiner 'If you haven't heard of Rachel Allen, you will soon. Ireland's blond and beautiful equivalent of Nigella Lawson...is taking her place on the international culinary scene with her everyday food that focuses on simple suppers and divine puddings.' Daily Mail YOU Magazine 'As wholesome and attractive as its charming author, Home Cooking is well thought out and accessibly written, with the emphasis on relaxed family meals. Ideal for anyone who needs to cook on a regular basis but hasn't much experience.' Sunday Telegraph 'The book I've taken to most this season is by the Irish Nigella (except prettier, blonde and a better cook), Rachel Allen. Her 'Bake' is simply and engagingly written: one irresistible thing after another.' Evening Standard About the Author Rachel Allen was brought up in Dublin and at the age of eighteen left to study at the prestigious Ballymaloe Cookery School. Today, she not only teaches at the school, she also writes regular features for national publications, presents highly acclaimed television programmes which have been broadcast internationally and in her spare time authors bestselling cookery books. She is also the winner of the Irish Book Awards Best Non-fiction 2012 for Easy Meals. Cake is her ninth cookbook.
